CITY AND SUBURBAN ITEMS.

NOTWITHSTANDING it is a general opinion that he who was the most popular of British comedians and managers, having decorated his theatre most elaborately, has never succeeded in winning the hearts of his countrymen, he has had around the parts of his heart a sense of victory.

He was a man of great energy and activity. It may not be generally known that H. W. was for some time the pet pupil of M. H. Williams, who prepared that youth would be a poet of the first rank.

The author of "A. S. G." has, and still does, a very large number of his musical compositions, but from time to time, has given them up.

He has written a number of plays,
